Makers of the Award-Winning Cascade Server content management software

Cascade Server 1.0 Released

SAN JOSE - APRIL 15, 2003 - Hannon Hill has just released Cascade Server Version 1.0 at Internet World Essentials in San Jose, CA. Their newest software solution takes aim at the enterprise content management (ECM) software market and proves to be extremely powerful. Utilizing J2EE and XML as its underpinnings, Cascade Server is well equipped to help companies and organizations manage content across enterprises of all sizes. Some highlights of the new enterprise class product include the ability to transform one piece of content into multiple formats such as HTML, printer friendly HTML, PDF, WML, etc. Users will also rave at Cascade Server's ability to automatically generate navigation menus, FAQ pages, and sitemaps through the use of XML index blocks. Cascade Server represents a new direction for Hannon Hill. The new solution is able to meet the needs of Fortune 1000 companies with its highly scalable core. Hannon Hill is eager to lend its expertise in content management to these larger enterprises in addition to the small and medium-sized organizations it has assisted with its SuperUpdate implementations. Cascade Server has been in development for over a year and its debut has been a success. "The Internet World show is a great place to release Cascade Server. The feedback we get is invaluable and the interest in our solution has been very satisfying," says CEO David Cummings. Cascade Server represents Hannon Hill's second successful software launch. SuperUpdate, Hannon Hill's award-winning web content management product, was on display as well. SuperUpdate is currently at version 3.0. Visit Hannon Hill's website (<http://www.hannonhill.com>) for more information about Cascade Server. The website includes a flash demo of Cascade Server in action and additional information about how it can improve your management of content. -----
