Makers of the Award-Winning Cascade Server content management software

Hannon Hill Releases Cascade Server 3.5

ATLANTA - JULY 1, 2005 – Hannon Hill Corporation, a leading provider of enterprise web content management (WCM) solutions, today announced the release a major upgrade for their flagship product: Cascade Server version 3.5.

"This is one of the most exciting releases since the original launch of Cascade Server," says David Cummings, President and Founder of Hannon Hill. "We listened closely to feedback and requests from our clients, and it's really paid off. Having great relationships with the end users of our software means we can improve and develop our product in tune with actual demand. I am confident the added features of this version will be of immediate value to our clients."

While the look and feel of the software has stayed familiar, there have been significant improvements to current functions, as well as new features designed to improve the usability and efficiency of the product.

Version 3.5 makes Cascade Server the first CMS product to introduce a personalized RSS feed for the user's dashboard. Managing workflows, assets checked-out, and messages through an RSS reader means less clogging of the user's email inbox. The feature will improve productivity and cut down on clutter, because users are given greater control over prioritizing messages and items needing attention.

In addition to its unique dashboard RSS feed, Cascade Server now offers: - Improved link and image checker - More fine-grained access rights for system items - Improved workflow builder - New workflow triggers - Target-level CSS control to allow more CSS options - Publish Sets to group related assets together for publishing as a group - Full product accessibility by persons with disabilities - Improved context sensitive help throughout - Enhanced publish option to control the base folder path

Cascade Server version 3.5 was made available to new and current clients on July 1, 2005.
